Prepared Remarks

Elena Park, CEO: We entered the quarter focused on execution. Demand remains structurally healthy, but shipment timing and mix create near-term earnings risk.

Daniel Cho, CFO: Q2 revenue was $1.22 billion and adjusted EPS was $1.41. We are updating investors on the full-year outlook.

Daniel Cho, CFO: Our prior outlook was 2026 revenue of $5.4-$5.6 billion and adjusted gross margin of approximately 58%. We now expect 2026 revenue of $5.0-$5.2 billion and adjusted gross margin of 55%-56%.

Analyst Q&A;

Analyst: What is the primary driver behind the change or reaffirmation in guidance?

Elena Park: The most important factors are export-license timing, a delayed hyperscale qualification cycle, and a less favorable second-half product mix.

Analyst: How should investors think about the durability of demand into 2027?

Elena Park: We are separating near-term execution effects from the longer-term demand environment and will continue to update investors as visibility improves.

Analyst: What are the key signposts for next quarter?

Daniel Cho: Execution against operating milestones, customer timing, and margin progression are the most important signposts.
